This Bridge Called my Back: Writings by Radical Women of Color, edited by Cherríe Moraga and Gloria Anzaldúa (3) This anthology is one of the most important and powerful works to come out of the women's movement. These writers speak through poems and essays, as well as through the telling of their own life stories. They discuss racism in the women's movement, homophobia, the connections between oppression, spirituality, women of color as writers, and the necessity to bring about change.
