Confessions of a Thief R W Masters

His father, a WW-2 veteran, recalled to active duty to fight in Korea had been killed in action. He died as a Marine Gunnery Sergeant. The promise was that neither the father or mother, both undocumented Mexican migrant workers, would be deported. Ed, however, was a natural born American and was safe except from the California authorities.

Despite the promises, his mother was arrested and deported. Ed was incarcerated as a 'homeless minor' in a California Youth Facility from age fourteen to eighteen. Upon his release, the State listed him as a felon, an ex-convict and, thus, unable to find work. Prospective employers said, California wouldn't lie; if they say you are an ex-convict, then you are.

In desperation, Ed turned to 'breaking and entering'. He became a thief in the night and was exceptionally successful.
